THE CHINA MAIL.

several hours on the tips of expectation. The weather, though not bright, was fortunately dry and pleasant, and the city in its gala dress was looking its best. Thursday being a general holiday, in honour of the arrival of the Duke and Duchess, Queen's Road was crowded by residents of all nationalities, whose numbers were considerably augmented by a large influx of Chinese visitors.

The Chinese procession got up in honour of their Royal Highnesses made a great commotion in the streets during the day and attracted the attention of large crowds of sightseers.

It was not till ten minutes past two that the signal gun at the Peak announced the approach of the Kaiser's Hind.

The excitement of the morning was at once reawakened. By the signal flag it was seen that the steamer was twelve miles distant, and although it was arranged that their Royal Highnesses would not land till about an hour after the steamer reached her berth, there was soon a vast crowd assembled in the vicinity of Pedder's Wharf. The wharf itself was reserved for the civil, naval and military authorities and a small number of the leading residents. The crowd of Chinese spread itself along the Praya and Pedder's Street, and was as quiet and orderly as a crowd could well be, in spite of its anxiety to get a good look at the "Number One Man" who was coming to see Hongkong. The verandahs in the neighbourhood from which a view of the wharf could be obtained were crowded with spectators, and as also the cause along the whole route to be traversed by their Royal Highnesses on their way to the City Hall, where the address of welcome was to be presented. The company on the wharf included The Officer Administering the Government, Admiral Sir George Salmon, Major-General Edwards, Mr. Justice Fielding Clarke, Mr. W. M. Doane, Acting Colonial Secretary, a large number of other representatives of the civil, naval and military services, members of the Legislative Council, the various foreign consuls, and a number of the leading Chinese merchants. There was also a considerable number of ladies.

Detachments from the Royal Artillery, the Northamptonshire Regiment and the Argyll and Sutherland Highlanders lined the route from the wharf to the City Hall, and the Artillery Volunteers, under the command of Capt. McCallum, took up a position on the Praya a little to the east of the wharf, with their seven-pounder guns, ready to fire a salute when the Duke and Duchess landed.

The steamer on entering the harbour, proceeded directly to the transport ship buoy in the rear of our anchorage, passing through a fleet of gallantly dressed launches, which lined the fairway, and after the buoy signals were fired, when she had reached the buoy, Hon. W. M. Doane, Acting Colonial Secretary, accompanied by Lieut. Thurnburg, Aide-de-camp and Mr. F. May, Private Secretary to the Governor, left the wharf in the launch Belle, and went on board. Meanwhile a number of steam launches and men-of-war's gigs lined the route between the steamer and the wharf and the crews of the men-of-war manned the yards. In a few minutes the cheering from the ships and the strains of the national anthem from the band of H. M. S. Monarchs announced that the Duke and Duchess were on their way to the shore. As the Victoria, the Governor's launch, conveying the distinguished visitors came alongside the wharf, the guns of the Volunteer Artillery opposite the esplanade saluted, and the band of the Royal and Sutherland Highlanders struck up the National Anthem. His Excellency the Officer Administering the Government, accompanied by Admiral Sir. Nowell Salmon and Major-General Edwards, advanced to meet their Royal Highnesses and bid them welcome to Hongkong. The Duke and Duchess, who both looked remarkably well and seemed much pleased with their reception, were after a minute or two of conversation, conducted to chairs specially prepared for them, and each carried by eight bearers, proceeded to the City Hall, preceded by four Sikh troopers as outsiders, while the company who had assembled on the wharf followed.

Her Royal Highness, before leaving the wharf, was presented with a bouquet by one of the young residents, Miss Robson, daughter of Staff-Commander Robson.

THE PRESENTATION OF THE ADDRESSES.

On the arrival at the City Hall, their Royal Highnesses were escorted to a raised platform in St. George's Hall, where a large crowd of citizens had assembled. Along with them on the platform were Her Excellency the Administrator, Vice-Admiral Sir. Nowell Salmon, Lady Salmon, Major-General Brudenell Edwards and Mrs. Cavaye. Below the platform were the members of the Legislative Council, and among those in the front reserved seats were the Chief Justice Clarke, Mr. Clarke, the Cousin of the various Powers represented in Hongkong, Officers of the British and foreign men-of-war in the harbour, officers of the regiment and several distinguished citizens.

Mr. Ryrie stepped forward and said—it is my very pleasant duty to present you with an address of welcome from the inhabitants of this Colony. Hongkong has ever been devoted to the illustrious family to whom you belong, its founder having been your illustrious mother, the Queen Empress, and I think I may assure you that every signature to this address does mean what the addressee says. The feeling of true loyalty which exists in this small colony cannot be surpassed in any part of Her Majesty's dominions. We have heard of you and your service and are fully convinced that you will in the future the good qualities of all as you have done in the past during your service in Bombay and other countries. We all know your good qualities, that they are entirely to the king to gain for you the love and affection of those who care under you (Cheers). Coming as you do from residence in proud Bombay, perhaps at the first glance you may not think that this colony is anything worth to speak of, but I think when you look around a little you will see what the indomitable energy and perseverance of the residents have done for you. You will find what has been made out of the bare rocky land that this was some fifty years ago; and although the work was first originated by British subjects, of late years these exertions have been ably seconded by our Chinese fellow citizens. We owe them much and they have shown by what they have done here—by investing largely in property in this Colony—the reliance they place upon the Government of the Queen Empress. They have shown their appreciation of the protection they have received from her in the past and their confidence in the protection which will receive from her in the future. I have only again to say that this address of welcome is one that you can accept as real and genuine, not coming from any wish to be servile but merely as an expression of the regard and affection of this Colony both towards yourself and the family to which you belong (cheers). You will probably pay a visit to some of the works which this Colony can show. We have docks here which are unsurpassed by any docks in the East. We have every convenience for shipping; and when you consider the enormous quantity that passes through here every year, and the goods to show and in no insignificant part of our Empire. (Cheers).

To Lieutenant-General His Royal Highness Prince Arthur, Earl of Aldershot, Duke of Connaught, K.G., K.T., K.C.B., G.C.S.I., G.C.M.G., G.C.I.E., C.B.—

London, Friday, 29th February, 1890.

—LONDON.—Fifty years ago Hongkong was a desolate and most unknown island with a scanty population of poor fishermen scattered along its shores. To-day it is an important portion of the Empire, with a population of over 200,000 souls; it is one of the busy centres of the commercial life of the world, receiving cash yearly into its spacious harbour millions of tons of the shipping of all nations; it is a valuable military position on the frontier of the empire and a great naval station. Such is it that it has its origin in the early years of Her Majesty's reign; it has received its Charter as a Colony from her hands; it has risen to its present position under her auspices; its capital city is known by her name; it owes to her beneficent government its first foundations, its growth and its prosperity, and to Her Most Gracious Majesty it has always been most loyal, and devoted.

Twice in the past it has had opportunities of proving that loyalty and devotion by the warmth of its welcome to members of the Royal Family, and it unfailingly rejoices at the opportunity now again afforded by the visit of Your Royal Highness, to give full expression to its feelings of ad reverence for the Queen Empress.

Your Royal Highness and Your Illustrious Consorts more heartily welcome to Hongkong. "We regret extremely that the Lenten Season and the shortness of your stay among us render it impossible for us to entertain you as we would wish to do, but we pray you to be pleased to accept the cordial hospitalities we are in a position to offer.

Your Royal Highness, as befits the grandson of the Great Duke, a soldier who has filled and yet may fit positions of great trust in the military service of Our Crown, we congratulate you on the completion of your tour of service in India, we wish you all its honours and rewards of a successful military career. We are glad that you will, while here, have an opportunity of inspecting our fortifications and examining into our means of defence.

In this welcome, in these congratulations and good wishes all ranks and classes in the Colony concur. With the native-born subjects of Her Majesty are associated in this demonstration the Americans and Europeans of other nationalities who form so important an element in our life, and who gladly avail themselves of this opportunity to give expression to their respect and admiration for the illustrious and venerable Ruler of a friendly nation. With us are also the Chinese, by far the most numerous and by no means the least important section of the Community, who desire to testify their gratitude to the Sovereign under whose just rule they live free from oppression, happy, wealthy and prosperous. These are Your Royal Highness' guides and representatives, a special Chinese entertainment and they hope that you will return with your presence thence.

In conclusion, so sincerely hope that Your Royal Highness will enjoy your visit to Hongkong, hurried though it be, that you will bear with you from our shores many pleasant reminiscences, and that you will have a happy and prosperous voyage from this, the most Eastern of Her Majesty's possessions, to the point in the west where you will pick up again the links in the chain of Empire that girdles the globe.

We pray you on your arrival in England to convey to Her Most Gracious Majesty, the expression of our devoted loyalty.

His Royal Highness, in reply, said—My Lords, I thank you, in the name of Her Royal Highness the Duchess and myself, to thank you for the very kind and flattering words which you have spoken. We are both very sensible of the kind and loyal welcome we are receiving at all hands during our very interesting voyage.

We well know the loyal manner in which the inhabitants of Hongkong welcomed her my brother the Duke of Edinburgh, and we have also heard in England of the magnificent demonstration that took place on the occasion of the Jubilee of our gracious sovereign. It is a source of great gratification to me that I should have been able to pay a visit to this—so have justly said—the most Eastern point of the British Empire. I have long heard of the energy and loyalty, not only of our own countrymen, in this important emporium of trade, but also of the many Europeans who have should it wise and have been happy to live under our own flag. I have, however, known that your Chinese fellow-subjects have also understood the advantages of British rule and that they readily accord their support to all good undertakings. (Cheers). I have, however, known that your Chinese fellow-subjects have also understood the advantages of British rule and that they readily accord their support to all good undertakings. (Cheers). I well know that the royal manner in which the inhabitants of Hongkong welcomed her my brother the Duke of Edinburgh, and we have also heard in England of the magnificent demonstration that took place on the occasion of the Jubilee of our gracious sovereign. It is a source of great gratification to me that I should have been able to pay a visit to this—so have justly said—the most Eastern point of the British Empire. I have long heard of the energy and loyalty, not only of our own countrymen, in this important emporium of trade, but also of the many Europeans who have should it wise and have been happy to live under our own flag.
